Dear Madam:

Your telegram to the Metropolitan Museum of Art, was referred by them to us. If you care to consult the books we have in our library, we should be glad to have you call, although it is not as convenient for us to receive visitors as it would be if we were not in the midst of building alterations.

I am enclosing a list of our publications, but I have no anticipation that they will meet your particular need as outlined in your telegram. Like the Metropolitan Museum, we are not in a position to send our books to individuals whom we know only through a telegraph address.

Yours very truly,

Secretary.
